occupations . . . those with available openings in Virginia.

The courses will be sales person, auto mechanic welder, construction plumber, auto service station mechanic, bricklayer, orderly, building custodian, electric appliance repairman.

The school will start with several of these, including auto mechanics, welding, masonry and service station mechanic and enlarge into the others as more faculty and equipment allow.

Students will be eligible for compensation of $14 weekly while training, and will be provided free daily bus transportation to and from their homes.

Although the initiating funds are federal appropriations for manpower development, the vocational school system will be a Virginia one, the officials explained. The Virginia Department of Education is the responsible training and supervisory agency, and H. L. Blanton, Nottoway superintendent of schools, and the county school board will be immediate supervisor of the Southside school.

Advisory Committee

The initial budget for the school to be worked out in conferences between Department of Education, Employment Commission and Federal HEW Department officials, will provide for operations from March 2, the projected starting date six weeks before to June 30, 1965. Continued operations would be contingent on future federal or state appropriations after that date.

The local advisory included Charles H. Martin, chairman; Charles Rosser, U. B. Morris, Winston Johnston, T. J. McIlwaine, William B. Wall, Herbert R. Stokes, Dudley L. Peery, S. W. Pettwey, Jr., John Sleek, Rudolph Dockett, all of Prince Edward County. Superintendent Blanton, of Nottoway and regional officials of the state Divisions of Vocational Training and Rehabilitation.

States adjacent to Virginia have launched a similar program, the officials told the advisory committee. North Carolina already has a thriving program, while West Virginia has just contracted for a $4.5 million program and Kentucky for a $7 million one.

leaf and very little in Type 21 dark-fired leaf. Where are the European manufacturers going to get wrappers or fillers if your planned Austria promotion succeeds?"

E. P. Lancaster said the present supply of government pool holdings is 4,150,000 pounds, but that it includes no wrapper or cutting tobacco. It consists mostly of snuff and twist tobaccos and heavy dark leaf.

Cooperative Report

Lancaster, manager of the Dark Tobacco Sales Cooperative, handlers and sellers of pooled tobacco, said he has had many recent inquiries from prospective purchasers.

James E. Warren, of Mecklenburg county, chairman of the State ASCS Committee presided Friday. Also speaking was Leroy Hodges, of Washington, a staff member of the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Services.

Stocks on hand of Virginia dark-fired tobacco have fallen to 20.2 million pounds. In addition, this year's disappearance is expected to be 19 million pounds, while 1963 production was only six and a half million pounds.

In recent years sales have out-stripped production and carry-over stocks have trended downward. If Virginia could get those 2,400 unplanted acres into production it would be just about what the industry needs currently. That was the concensus of opinion Friday.

A series of meetings is to be held soon throughout the producing areas to try to get that unused land into the hands of willing growers . . . who just may hold the solution in their hands . . . if the nonplanting owners cooperate.

New Delegate To House

Daniel Henry Almond, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Almond, a Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. engineer, and resident of Roanoke County, has just taken his seat a sRepublican delegate to the House of Delegates. The Almonds have three children. Billy, Howard, and Tacey Ann. Delegate Almond met his wife, the former Patricia Malmar, when her father, a retired Marine Corps captain, bought a summer home in Appomattox county in 1947. W. H. Almond now retired, was formerly with the National Park Service.

SCA Offers Many Prizes, Trophies

The Student Cooperative Association is offering many prizes in a Magazine Subscription Drive now underway at the Appomattox Elementary School. School Principal Randall E. Hill has emphasized that proceeds from the sale will be used for "worthwhile projects." Currently the school is buying a duplicating machine from results of last year's subscription drive, Hill said.

High boy and girl from both upper and lower grades will receive a trophy. High salesman each day will receive fifty cents. For each single subscription and for each two subscriptions to the Saturday Evening Post, the salesman will get a toy. All students who sell magazines that give 50 per cent will draw for a $2.00 prize. Room with greatest number of magazine sales will receive a prize, and a home room subscription to a magazine goes to the teacher of the high salesman. A candy bar will be given for each subscription to a 50 per cent magazine. Points will also get the children prizes.

No Steak, Cake In Survival Diet

With the cooperation of the County 4-H Council, the News-Editor of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN began a special diet Saturday, January 18. Civil Defense authorities published a suggested list of canned goods for supplying a fall-out shelter. So, armed with bottled water (sealed like home canned goods), soups, fruits, vegetables, and one box of carackers, the News Editor, Mrs. M. G. Simpson, promised to eat only "survival food" — not to refrigerate anything, including bottled drinks —and see what would happen to the appetite and morale of a "Human Guinea Pig" during an average working week. She is glad to report that one doesn't go hungry, using U. S. Government pamphlet as a guide to eating: that there's a good variety of food, that most Americans could certainly miss such items as fresh meat, eggs, cake, cookies, fresh fruits and vegetables, and that all - American favorite ice cream.

A display of "survival food" was taken to county 4-H clubs by Miss Peggy Draper, H. H. Arent and Don Moody, Assistant Agent during the past few weeks.

Rebels Bow To Brookville; Jr. Rebels Record Victories

Jan. 18 — The Appomattox Rebels lost a big game to the Brookville Bees. By winning, the Bees moved into the Group II, District IV Northern Division lead. The Rebels were led by John Farrar, Jimmy Torrence, and Doug Mitchell each scoring 14 points each.

Roger Colinger and Howard West together contributed 46 points for the victors. Brookville spent much of the night at the foul line as they took 42 unguarded shots.

Appomattox FFA Is Complimented

W. C. Dudley, Area Supervisor for Vocational Agriculture, complimented the Appomattox Chapter, FFA, meeting Friday Jan. 17, as an organization 'to be proud of.' He spoke in particular about the conduct of FFA members and the candidates for 'FFA Sweetheart' who went to dinner at Maude's Restaurant just before the annual dance. A member of the State Department of Education happened to drop in at the time, and was so impressed by their quiet good manners he used it as an illustration for a talk before a meeting of 109 Chapters of the FFA.

Dudley said that 'we have to run fast to keep up' with modern day progress and encouraged the boys to continue in their work. He spoke of seeing a cartoon with an FFA boy on a trapeze swinging out toward 'Awards, Trips, Recognition, and Degrees' 'You're not missing many of those bars,' said Dudley.

Help Wanted To Complete County Sabin Records

Response was very good to a plea by the Lions Club and the County Health Department for volunteers to complete Sabin records. The Health Department reports that all cards have been typed. Now, they need more volunteers to mark the cards. NO TYPING is required. So even if you have never typed, or your typing fingers are "all thumbs", you can BE OF GREAT HELP by giving even one hour of your time to mark up the TYPE III Sabin doses given to county citizens. Just call or stop by the County Health Department on South Church Street. And here's a BIG BIG "THANK YOU" from the Health Dept. and the Lions Club to all who are helping make this program such a success.

Abbitt Will Ask Re-Evaluation Of Democrat Delegate Plan

The Democratic vote in a general election contest that drew a good turnout of voters throughout the state should be used as the basis of delegate apportionment for the 1964 Democratic convention, State Democratic Chairman Watkins M. Abbitt suggested Saturday.

Abbitt told a Richmond reporter he didn't know what, if anything, he might recommend to the Democratic State Central Committee on February 22 other than that it reconsider the plan adopted here a week ago.

That plan, based on the vote cast for Governor Harrison in the 1961 Democratic primary, drew sharp protest.

Critics said it penalized and delapped unfairly at the Ninth, Tenth and Second congressional districts, which returned majorities for Harrison's opponent, former Lieutenant Governor Stephens.

Two Deplore It

In statements last week, Governor Harrison and Senator Byrd both deplored the primary-record apportionment plan. As far as could be determined, no state Democratic convention has ever been apportioned according to the primary vote for governor in a recent general election.

Keying the vote to the primary returns for Harrison would have given the Byrd organization citadels of Southside Virginia, Richmond and other areas a disproportionately high majority.

Abbitt, the newly elected state chairman, said last Monday the central committee should reconsider its action in light of complaints that had reached him. He later called a committee meeting for the afternoon of February 22, prior to the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner that night at Hotel John Marshall.

Queried Saturday about his plans, Abbitt said he wasn't sure whether he would present specific recommendations but he intended to look up the precedents and hoped the February 22 session would adopt a plan fair to all Democrats.
